RULES OF THE NEXT HOUSE

DEMOCRATS WANT FAIR PLAY.

Representative Oates of Alabama, Outlines the Plans of the Two

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16 .- The Post today prints an interview with Congressman Oates of Alabama, one of the democratic leaders, who made a fight last session against the direct tax bill, upon the organcharge who shall determine the subject in caucus, and the line of action to te pursued on political measures." Now if the republicans will act fairly and squarely, if they will treat the minority in a spirit of fairness, the democrats will act in the same spirit toward them. We will not adopt obstructive tactics, but will rest content with recording, according to our negative votes, and throwing the responsibility for legislation on their shoulders. Even with the congressmen from the new states they legislation on their shoulders. Even with the congressmen from the new states they will only have three over a quorum and they will never, I am confident, be able to muster a quorum of their own party at any time. The democrate, with thirteen majority, only succeeded once by streng their confidence of the

As to the speakership, Oates says he beles McKinley will be elected.
"How about the revision of rules?" "How about the revision of rules?"
"There is where the democrats must show firmness. I say plainly I think the republicans will try to ride rough shod over us. Their first attempt will be in the organization of the house. Instead of adopting, according to precedent, the rules of the previous house, they will attempt to proceed under general parliamentary rules to organize and thrust upon us a set of rules that will give the democrats completely into the hands of a bare republican majority. Yet I am in favor of a revision. A two-thirds majority, for instance, ought to be able to suspend the regular order and take up any measure. This privilege ought against man's comfort, and robs both brain not to be defeated by a single object
